Diagram illustrating the subtraction of 5 from 10 using blocks:

- Top row: Two groups of 5 blocks each, followed by a minus sign and a blank line for the result.
- Middle row: A single group of 10 blocks.
- Bottom row: A single group of 5 blocks.

Diagram illustrating a memory layout or data structure. It shows a grid of 4 rows and 16 columns, representing a 64-bit memory space. The grid is divided into four rows and sixteen columns. The first row is a single continuous block. The second row is split into two 8-column blocks with a gap between them. The third row is split into two 8-column blocks with a gap between them. The fourth row is split into two 8-column blocks with a gap between them. The gap in the second row is labeled '.....'. The gap in the third row is labeled '——'. The gap in the fourth row is labeled '□ 3:24-25 □ 3:7 □'.
